Painting lighthouses requires a special skill set that includes both drawing & painting skills. But because of the function lighthouses serve they are usually found in distinctive, often remote or rugged landscapes along coastlines. Their often stark white shapes stand out against the sky right on the edges of the sea where the shoreline, beaches, setting and sky all contribute to their uniqueness.

In this workshop David will help you create distinctive landscapes that include all of the main features that are common to lighthouse subjects. David has painted lighthouses all over the world and has developed and refined a selection of unique ways to create Lighthouse subjects. His approach will speed up your creative process and help you create better compositions with confidence.

With Lighthouses... it's always about the light, time of day, and weather, which can evoke powerful and emotional moods to even simplest Lighthouse landscapes. Working with their locations and surrounding features, makes them... very satisfying.
